

Cannabinoids

To relieve pain

Your doctor has prescribed a cannabinoid, a drug derived from cannabis, for you. It is used to treat chronic pain. Cannabinoids act on some of the body's natural receptors to relieve pain.

How is this medication taken?

In Canada, there is only one cannabinoid in the form of capsules to swallow: nabilone (Cesamet). Generally, it should be taken 1 to 3 times a day, as recommended by your doctor.

The drug is also available as a spray (Sativex). The jet should be directed under the tongue or inside the cheeks. Don't spray into the throat as this may cause irritation. You should also avoid spraying it into your nose.

The maximum dosage for the first day is 2 sprays at least 4 hours apart. After that, increase the medication as recommended by your doctor. Don't use the spray if you have injuries in your mouth. It's important to respect the prescribed doses.

Patients who receive a cannabinoid prescription commit to a therapeutic contract. Here are the rules to follow:

- > respect the prescribed doses
- > get your prescription from only one doctor
- > buy all your medications from the same pharmacy (of your choice)

How long will this treatment go on?

Cannabinoids are used to relieve persistent pain. The treatment can go on for months or years. Cannabinoids are taken alone or in combination with other drugs.

Never stop taking your medication from one day to the next, as you could experience withdrawal symptoms (tremors, anxiety, trouble sleeping, etc.). Talk with your doctor about it first.

What are the side effects?

Like all drugs, cannabinoids can cause side effects. You may experience any of the following:

- diarrhea
- dizziness

- drowsiness (wanting to sleep)
- confusion or disorientation
- attention or memory problems
- hallucinations or strange ideas
- weakness or fatigue
- rapid heartbeats
- changes in appetite

These side effects usually disappear over time. If they don't, talk to your pharmacist or doctor. Your dose may need to be decreased.

Tell your doctor if you have ever had or currently have the following health problems:

- heart condition
- psychiatric disorders

Cannabinoids can make these worse.

Could I become addicted to cannabinoids?

Like marijuana, cannabinoids in tablets or oral sprays can cause physical and psychological dependence. If you want to stop taking the drug, first talk to your doctor, who will tell you how to do it safely.

What is the difference between physical dependence and psychological dependence?

- > Physical dependence: If you stop taking the medication abruptly, you may become irritable or have trouble sleeping. These signs of withdrawal can be controlled by slowly reducing doses. Your doctor will adjust the medication as needed.
- > Psychological dependence: If you feel you're taking it for any reason other than pain (such as to increase the feeling of well-being and pleasure), it is very important to talk to your doctor.

If you have ever had a problem with overuse (regardless of the substance, including alcohol), report it to your doctor. He or she will be better able to help you and ensure the treatment is safe for you.

Can I drink alcohol during the treatment?

Alcohol can intensify the effects of the treatment on the brain. That's why it's advisable to avoid or limit the intake of alcohol (and drinks containing it) when you're under the influence of cannabinoids. But be careful: don't suddenly stop this treatment because you intend to drink alcohol (for example, during a night out).

Can I drive and do manual labour during the treatment?

Cannabinoids can cause drowsiness. You could have trouble driving a car or using certain tools.

Before driving again or using dangerous tools, make sure you're functional and fully awake.

Can I take cannabinoids while pregnant or breastfeeding?

Cannabinoids - just like cannabis - are not recommended during pregnancy. They have an impact on the development of the unborn child. If you're pregnant or breastfeeding, or planning a pregnancy, talk to your doctor about it.

Do I need to follow any special diet during the treatment?

No.

What happens if I take other medications or natural products?

Some drugs or natural products can change the effect of cannabinoids. For example, any drug that causes drowsiness may increase the tranquilizing effect of cannabinoids.

It's always best to talk to your doctor or pharmacist before taking other products. He or she will make sure to avoid interactions, either by changing the time you take your medication or by offering you another product.

What should I do if I forget to take a dose?

Take it as soon as possible. However, if it's almost time for the next dose, wait until the usual time.

Don't double the dose.

Where should I store my medication?

The Sativex vaporizer should be kept refrigerated until opened. Place the vial in an upright position. Once opened, write the date of opening on the bottle and keep it at room temperature.

Cesamet capsules can be stored at room temperature. However, don't store them in the kitchen or bathroom. Medications are sensitive to heat and humidity.

Remember that all medications should be stored in a safe place, away from children.

What should I do in case of an emergency or overdose?

Important: Go to the emergency room.

For Immediate assistance, call 9-1-1.
